

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION

A.5248 (Gottfried)/S.3577 (Rivera)

An act to amend the public health and state finance laws to create the New York Health Act, a single-payer system.

This proposal to create a government-run single payer health care system in New York is bad for small businesses. It would impose significant tax increases and threaten jobs. In its latest iteration, the bill has gone from bad to worse and the Employer Alliance for Affordable Health Care strongly opposes this measure.

Creating a single payer system is cost prohibitive:

- An independent analysis of this proposal by RAND Corporation, released last year, estimated New York would need significant tax increases – income and payroll taxes – to pay for this new program, starting at $139 billion in new tax revenues in 2022 and $210 billion in 2031. This is on top of the billions we already spend on health care.
- The new New York Health Act would include coverage for long-term care, which, according the RAND, would add $18-22 billion to the cost.
- The newest proposal also exempts income below $25,000 from paying any tax to support the New York Health Act. This simply shifts the cost onto everyone else, compounding the tax impact on small businesses.

Proposal does not guarantee lower costs:

- Sponsors of the New York Health Act claim there will be significant savings in health care spending because the state will regulate the prices charged by doctors, hospitals and pharmaceutical manufacturers, and be able to negotiate lower provider reimbursements. However, there is no evidence of provider willingness to be paid less than they are today, and no guarantee of savings.

Other states have considered — and rejected — single payer proposals:

- California lawmakers this week said considering a single payer system would be “premature” because the state still doesn’t have a clear plan to fund and implement a single-payer system that is estimated to cost $400 billion – double the state’s total budget.
- In neighboring Vermont, former Governor Peter Shumlin backed away from his single payer proposal once financial reports concluded that funding the program would cost $4.3 billion and require significant tax increases for residents and businesses.

Offering benefits like health insurance both small business owners & employees:

- A single payer system would take away employer-sponsored health coverage. It’s been shown that offering employees health coverage as a benefit helps business owners attract and retain skilled employees, which helps provide long-term economic stability for employers. Many employees will accept higher benefits in lieu of a higher salary.
- Employees with employer-sponsored coverage demonstrate improved wellness, decreased absenteeism, improved employee health and morale. People with coverage are more likely to seek preventative care and live overall healthier lives.

Focus on “universal” coverage rather than disrupting the current system:

- Getting every New Yorker covered is a laudable goal and New York has been successful in covering 95% of the population. Instead of completely undoing a system that is working for the majority of New Yorkers, lawmakers should focus attention on efforts to cover the remaining 5% of people who are not currently covered.
